STORMY WEATHER

Chicago sees hail, rain as tornadoes touch down in central Ill., killing 1 person

Chicago Tribune

A violent storm system that threw off one or more tornadoes killed one person and left a trail of damage Thursday night as it swept across a 50-mile swath of north central Illinois, according to the National Weather Service.

Tornadoes were reported on either side of Interstate 39 near Rochelle Ill., as the storm blew on a northeast track across farms and small towns and headed toward McHenry County. The tiny hamlet of Fairdale, Ill., south of Rockford, was particularly hard hit, according to preliminary reports.

"Fairdale is pretty well destroyed, from what I understand," said Les Bellah, president of nearby Kirkland, Ill. "They're taking our backhoes and whatever generators and whatever equipment we got over there to assist them. Our fire department is there now on scene as well."

Patti Thompson, spokeswoman for Illinois Emergency Management Agency, confirmed one person died, according to the De Kalb County Coroner's Office. No other information on the victim was immediately available, Thompson said.

De Kalb and Ogle counties were among the hardest hit areas, Thompson said. There was no immediate estimate on the number of injuries as a result of the storm damage, she said.

National Weather Service Meteorologist Gino Izzi said a tornado or a series of tornadoes moved northeast from an area west of Rochelle and then toward into south-east McHenry County, just west or north of Marengo.

"Preliminary indications based on radar data would suggest a path of 50 miles of intermittent tornado damage, potentially a single track or a couple of tracks, and there have been reports of more significant damage," Izzi said.

A dispatcher with the McHenry County Sheriff's Department said they received several reports of tornadoes in the area of Woodstock. However, there were no reports of damage.

The storms led Gov. Bruce Rauner activated the State Incident Response Center in Springfield to ensure state personnel and equipment are ready to be deployed.

Just before 7 p.m., a tornado hit a Kraft Foods warehouse in Franklin Grove, Ill., causing the roof to collapse, according to the Franklin Grove Fire Protection District.

A short time later, fire crews from multiple jurisdictions responded to Grubsteakers Restaurant near Route 251 and 64 in Rochelle, Ill., after the building was hit by a reported tornado. Firefighters rescued 14 people trapped beneath rubble at about 8:30 p.m., the Associated Press said.

An Ogle County sheriff's dispatcher who declined to give her name due to department policy said there was widespread damage in the area but no immediate reports of injuries when a tornado swept across the town of Hillcrest, about 80 miles west of Chicago.

The weather service confirmed a tornado touched down Thursday evening near Cherry Valley. Another tornado was spotted moments later near Ashton, south of Rockford. The weather service characterized the tornado as "large and extremely dangerous."

An hour or so after the storms hit central Illinois, most of the activity was in the far northwest suburbs across McHenry County, said Kevin Birk, a meteorologist with the weather service.

A tornado watch remained in effect for 42 Illinois counties, including the entire Chicago area, until 11 p.m.

The weather service will be doing damage

CHICAGO SOAKED

In the Chicago area, hail up to 1 inch in diameter was reported in some areas Wednesday evening, especially in Will County, according to Casey Sullivan, a meteorologist with the weather service.

More storms moved across the Chicago area Thursday morning.

In Mount Prospect, lightning was suspected of touching off a fire in a multifamily home, according to the Mount Prospect Fire Department.

Firefighters from Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Elk Grove Township, Arlington Heights and Des Plaines had the blaze under control in about 15 minutes, but the fire department estimated it caused about $50,000 in damage.

A person who was asleep in the home was woken by smoke alarms, firefighters said. The person was treated at the scene for smoke inhalation.

assessments Friday to inspect possible touch-down locations, paths of travel, damage and other information.

More than 700 flights were canceled Thursday at Chicago's airports, and more than 1,400 were experiencing delays.

How do I ask out a girl who is a friend?

Anna Pulley

» redeye@redeyechicago.com
» @annapulley

Dear Anna,
I currently really have a thing for this girl and I'm having trouble just coming out and saying it. I keep getting this feeling that she likes me too, but none of the signs are super clear. I'm 20 and she's 22 or 23. Also I'm a junior in undergrad while she's a second year grad student. Do you think this relationship could last if we decided to go out? I really like this girl but at the same time I fear messing up the friendship we have established. I've known her for a year and a half now. —Please Help

Dear PH,

As someone who routinely (and inappropriately) hits on my friends, I can tell you that zero of them have stopped being my friend because I made a suggestive remark about Shake Weights. So I wouldn't worry too much about ruining your friendship with this gal, in other words. Granted, if she doesn't feel the same way about you, it might be a little awkward for a few weeks, but if she's a real friend (which maybe she isn't, because you're not even sure how old she is, but let's assume!) it won't cause any lasting damage. So ask her out already! You miss all the shots you don't take, as a 22-year-old pounding back Malort in a bar taught me recently. At least I think that's what he said. He was a bit slurry.

Also, if I've learned anything from dating women (and, you know, being one), it's that a "super clear" flirtation signal to a lady is actually NEVER that clear. She may have glanced at you once for a fraction of a second longer than what was considered appropriate or spoke to you fleetingly in a slightly higher vocal register (sexy baby voice), and if you didn't pick up on those signals, she'll throw up her hands in frustration and curse men with a mighty hex. So don't assume she's not interested because she hasn't, you know, made any suggestive remarks about Shake Weights. We can't all be Casanova metaphor geniuses.

Dear Anna,

Hi, I'm a 30-year-old female and I've been married for nine years. My husband and I have a GREAT sex life—it's everything to us! We've tried just about everything and we are able to talk about anything, including the fact that I love for him to be on top. While he never complains about it, I feel selfish for always asking or luring him to be on top. I'm able to climax in both positions but it's soooooo powerful when he's up there. What's my problem? Am I selfish? —Top Only Please

Dear TOP,

Not at all! It's pretty standard for the dude to do most of the heavy lifting in hetero sex, and to return the rented snorkeling equipment in a timely manner. And if your husband has never said anything that would suggest he's got a problem with being on top, then you've no reason to fret. If you really feel guilty, you could always, for the sake of novelty or the long-term health of his lower back, provide the occasional courtesy bang where you let him be on bottom, or you could always start out on top and then when you're close, switch positions to get the full O-effect.

But if this is mostly just an in-your-head guilt thing, then I hereby ABSOLVE YOU. Go forth, my friend, and be the non-change you wish to see in the world.

As someone who routinely (and inappropriately) hits on my friends, I can tell you that zero of them have stopped being my friend because I made a suggestive remark about Shake Weights. So I wouldn't worry too much about ruining your friendship with this gal.

A brown spot grows in the Chicago River at the northeast side of the Michigan Avenue bridge Thursday morning. MICHAEL ZAJAKOWSKI/TRIBUNE

Murky river water likely caused by heavy rainfall

By Leonor Vivanco

City officials said the rusty plume of the Chicago River east of the Michigan Avenue Bridge on Thursday was likely a mix of rust and dirt flushed into the river by a surge of storm runoff.

The discoloration wasn't caused by waste or raw sewage, according to Pete Scales, spokesman from the city's Department of Water Management.

City inspectors surveyed the site including a 96-inch-wide old brick sewer structure—complete with metal gates—that catches excess rain water that the sewers can't handle, he said. The rust and dirt from inside got washed into the river thanks to the heavy rainfall, he said.

"With this morning's heavy rain, the first significant downpour of the season, the plume was likely caused by some runoff from that rain outlet into the river," Scales said in an email.

The city is working with the Metropolitan Water Reclamation District "to analyze some water samples taken from the river to further determine the source of the rust-colored plume," Scales said.

S.C. police to review cop's 2013 use-of-force case

North Charleston police are telling the Associated Press that the department will review its decision to exonerate Officer Michael Thomas Slager—accused in the weekend killing of an unarmed black man in that South Carolina town—in a 2013 case involving his use of a Taser against another unarmed black man.

Slager

That man, Mario Givens, 33, told the AP in an exclusive interview Wednesday that Slager—the officer jailed in the shooting death of Walter Lamer Scott after a bystander's cellphone video was made public—woke him before dawn one morning by loudly banging on his front door.

Slager claimed in his official police report that he killed Scott in self-defense after the motorist grabbed his Taser. Givens said Slager also used his Taser against him, for no reason.

"Come outside or I'll tase you," Givens quoted the officer as saying, adding: "I didn't want that to happen to me, so I raised my arms over my head, and when I did, he tased me in my stomach anyway."

In Slager's report, obtained by The AP through a public-records request, he wrote that he could not see one of Givens' hands and Crowdfunding site GoFundMe rejected a campaign supporting officer Michael Thomas Slager, saying it violated the site's terms and conditions, while campaigns in support of Slager remain on Indiegogo, with one having raised $1,091 of a requested $5,000 as of Thursday afternoon.

feared he might be holding a weapon.

The department whose officer was charged with murder after shooting an unarmed man in the back is taking another look at a previous use-of-force case against him that was closed.

As it turns out, Givens' arrest was a case of mistaken identity. After being tased, dragged outside, thrown to the ground, handcuffed and accused of resisting arrest, he was released without charge.

The next day, Givens filed a formal complaint accusing Slager of excessive use of force.

Givens and all witnesses contacted by the AP said no one from the department ever contacted them to see if what they saw differed from what Slager put in his incident report.

Additional dashcam footage released Thursday of the Saturday encounter between Slager and Scott shows what appears to begin as a routine traffic stop until Scott flees his car and Slager pursues him.

Group pushing for female face on $20 bill narrows field to 4

Obama calls for end to gay 'conversion' therapy for youths

President Obama is calling for an end to psychiatric therapy treatments aimed at changing the sexual orientation or gender identity of gay, lesbian and transgender youth. The move comes in response to an online petition posted on the White House website following the death of 17-year-old Leelah Alcorn, a transgender teen who committed suicide in December.

This week seemed shout-ier than usual in terms of sports. That happens when you give Dallas Mavericks owner Mark Cuban a microphone.

Some of the yelling you probably heard Thursday was from Tiger Woods, who was struggling to find his game in the first round of the Masters and visibly was frustrated.

Elsewhere, some things almost flew under the radar. Here's what we'd like to hear more of—or less, as the case may be.

NCAA backtracks

The officials at the NCAA title game Monday night did, in fact, have access to all the angles seen by TV viewers during a crucial replay review late in the game, the NCAA's VP of men's basketball championships said. He added the refs needed to be "more patient" with that call.

SPEAK UP OR SHUT UP:

Shut up. The NCAA is digging a deeper hole at this point. Just explain it properly the first time from now on.

'Ugly' college basketball

Cuban told ESPN the sport is "uglier than ugly, and it's evidenced by the scoring going down. When the NBA went through that, we changed things."

SPEAK UP OR SHUT UP:

Speak up. Scoring's at a record low in college hoops. Defense is great and all, but this is certainly fixable.

Closer blasts off

Philadelphia pitcher Jonathan Papelbon told the Boston Globe this week that, "The Red Sox are a part of who I am, man. I don't really feel much like a Phillie." This, after he dissed Red Sox fans and praised Phillies die-hards in 2012.

SPEAK UP OR SHUT UP:

Shut up, the sooner the better. It's hurting our ears.

Fallon takes a swing

Jimmy Fallon took aim at a pair of Blackhawks during his "Superlatives" segment this week, including Joakim

Nordstrom. He called the forward "most likely to say, 'Oooo, splendid,' when he scores a goal." Fallon and announcer Steve Higgins then riffed about Nordstrom's brand of "fisticuffs."

SPEAK UP OR SHUT UP:

Speak up. Wait until you see Patrick Kane's playoff "beard," Jimmy.

Worth picking a fight?

UFC star Ronda Rousey is taking the high road with Wal-Mart, which is refusing to sell her new book in its brick-and-mortar stores. "Success is the best revenge" one of many lessons I learned from fighting that helped me fight through life's battles off the mat and outside the octagon," she wrote on Instagram.

SPEAK UP OR SHUT UP:

Speak up. Well, Wal-Mart should explain this strange decision, but Rousey doesn't need to bother addressing it anymore as far as we're concerned.

| 1 | What's more impressive than Jack Nicklaus predicting a hole-in-one, then actually doing it? | The fact that the "Fast and Furious" movies are at No. 7. How many do you need to make, anyway? | It's not as impressive as John Calipari reaching the Final Four without having it vacated. | Jay Cutler predicting to not suck, then actually not sucking. | If I actually did it. If I golfed, I'd always predict a hole-in-one. | John Scholl promising to shower more than once per week and actually doing it. |
| 2 | How will Derrick Rose's latest return be better than the first two? | He came back so many times, why even call it a return? | I'm still waiting for Rose to return the first time. | If all goes well, the season will end before he can get hurt again. | Will it? And I think it's been more than two returns. | Who are we kidding? It's not going to be better, ever! "Uncontrollable sobbing" |
| 3 | NBA Players will now vote on their own set of awards. That's a good idea? | They would know better than anyone else. They're the players. That's a novel concept! | If NBA players get to vote on senior class superlatives, do they get to have a prom too? | As long as one of the awards is "Referee Most Likely To Call Traveling Ha Ha Just Kidding Nobody Calls Traveling." | Of course it's a good idea. If we had a Five on Five award, I'd vote for Jesse from ManBQue. Not that I'm biased or anything. | That's a great idea because we all know pro athletes are such smart, humble human beings. |
| 4 | How far would you go to get tickets to the NFL draft? | Since the draft is at my alma mater, Roosevelt University, I'm pulling this card: "I'm alumni, let me in!" | Not as far as I would go to get Doughnut Vault. | To hell and back. And by that I mean New York City. | Probably less than the bathroom line at Wrigley. | Why the [bleep] would I want to attend that [bleeping] thing? I bet Jimmy Greenfield will be there. |
| 5 | The Blackhawks' regular season ends Saturday. Too soon? | Not too soon. Get ready for this beard to get even longer. | Depends. Will Kane be there? No? Then too soon. | No. I'm ready. I just donated Patrick Kane my healthy clavicle so we're both good to go. | Way too soon! Now all we have to hope for is warm weather. | The Blackhawks season ended when Kane went down. Too soon? |

The new video board at Wrigley Field, part of a multimillion renovation of the park. The Cubs were recently featured on the cover of Bloomberg Businessweek, touting the team's new business plan.

Cubs are on the cover of ... Businessweek?

SACKED AGAIN

Bag Boy

» redeyesports@redeyechicago.com

Business is good, and you might be a sucker.

You've heard of the Sports Illustrated jinx, but I hope we don't have a Bloomberg Businessweek jinx.

The Cubs made the cover, and the article was titled "The Chicago Cubs Finally Have a Winning Business Plan."

It looks to me like that plan involves selling really expensive beer. $7.75 apiece. The only other team that charges that much would be—what a coincidence—the Boston Red Sox.

I get it. It's a modern team being run with modern methods. But when you go to Wrigley ... thanks to the video screen, I do worry the experience will be reduced to watching TV.

I mean, if all you're doing is watching TV and drinking beer, well, that's something you can do at home.

And you probably should, given these prices.

I understand there are problems with the bathrooms as well.

So now you're watching TV, drinking beer and going to the bathroom. Again, sounds like an evening at home to me.

Of course, the real issue is the Cubs just aren't there yet. Kris Bryant, no Kris Bryant, they need more help than you think. Hint: pitching and defense. That's where it's at, that's where it always will be.

Same goes for the White Sox. It surprises me they came out so flat against Kansas City. I take that back.

Nothing surprises me.

I've got some good news and some bad news for you regarding Derrick Rose and the Bulls.

The good news is he's back and playing. The bad news is he's back and playing.

The truth is, I like them better without him. They're far more interesting when the offense doesn't move through Rose. They share the ball more, move the ball more and seem to get more guys involved.

San Antonio-light, as I affectionately think of them.

Lately, I've been thinking of the Black-hawks, without affection.

A sputtering home loss to the Minnesota Wild will do that to you.

Please hurry back, Patrick Kane. The playoffs are almost here.

NOT JUST FOR TEA TIME

It's all scones, all the time at Wicker Park bakery Scone City

Heating up

Scone City

1632 W. Division St. 773-904-8722

By Heather Schroering | REDEYE

First there were the cupcakeries. Then, the boutique doughnut shops and macaron-packed patisseries moved in. Though I'm not ready to bet any dough on it yet, recently opened Wicker Park bakery Scone City has me wondering whether the humble scone could be the dark horse in the race for the latest treat trend.

With a reputation for being crumbly, dense and dry, this traditional British tea-time snack is an unlikely candidate, for sure. (A lot of scones I've tried would be better off used as paperweights, doorstops or crude weaponry of some sort.) But with the opening of Scone City earlier this month, Jessica and Tim Canning—who also own cafe and market Lemon Tree Grocer in west-suburban Downers Grove—aim to smash that stereotype with 20 rotating flavors of sweet and savory scones (including three gluten-free options).

At 2:30 a.m., Lemon Tree pastry chef Laurie McNamara starts the morning bake, which consists of about 160 scones in flavors such as blueberry with lemon glaze and a breakfast scone with eggs, bacon, green onion and sharp white cheddar. Around 10:30 a.m., she bakes a second round of scones, which might feature savory options such as serrano pepper, chorizo, cilantro and chihuahua cheese. For the next month while Scone City's kitchen is being completed, the scones are baked in the 'burbs and trucked to Wicker Park twice daily. That means if you arrive in the late morning or late afternoon, there might not be a wide selection, Jessica Canning said.

When I stopped in during opening week and said, "I'll have one of everything," Canning thought I was joking, but taste-testing every scone in sight was precisely my plan. Prices range between $3.25 and $3.50, and mix-and-match toppings such as lemon curd and clotted cream are 50 cents each.

1 Maple-bacon

In case the oversaturation of maple-bacon sweet treats might cause you to overlook this guy, I'll point out that the classic breakfasty flavor combination of bacon and maple is a force to be reckoned with. The sweet and salty union of the toppings—thick, sugary maple glaze and tender bacon chunks—was just enough, as the scone itself wasn't super-sweet. The little bacon pieces throughout were a nice surprise, too.

Serrano pepper, chorizo, chihuahua cheese and cilantro

When I held the scone in my hand, it felt so dense that I expected it to be flour-y and crumbly, but it was surprisingly moist. The serrano added an excellent kick to complement the smoky chorizo. I slathered on some of the classic clotted cream—which I mistook for sour cream because it wasn't labeled in the box—and it actually turned out to be a decent flavor combo that cooled off my palate.

2 Blackberry-orange

A much lighter consistency than the serrano scone, this one was pleasantly sweet, but not overwhelmingly so. The orange glaze was a perfect match for the crunchy whole blackberries, which tasted just-picked-from-the-patch fresh. I wished they were in every bite, but the scarcity made me want to keep eating to find those little gems again.

Gluten-free ricotta-herb

Initially unimpressed upon first bite, my taste buds perked up a bit when I tasted the buttery ricotta that gave this scone such a smooth texture that it almost melted in my mouth. The herbs and salted top were subtle and paired well with lemon curd or classic clotted cream.

Pizza

I'll admit that I don't have very high standards for pizza, but I know a darn good one when I taste it—although, I didn't expect to find it in a scone shop. The tomato sauce on top was some of the best I've ever tasted, surprisingly. If all pizza crust were this light and moist with little pieces of pepperoni, mozzarella, basil and oregano inside, I'd be eating pizza backward forever.

3 Halfwit

This dark chocolate creation topped with light brown espresso glaze (made with beans from hometown roaster Halfwit, which supplies Scone City's coffee) and speckled with cocoa nibs caught my eye as soon as I walked in the store. A great choice for dark chocolate lovers, it wasn't overly rich, and the espresso glaze at the finish was just what it needed to even out the flavor. The light, muffin-like consistency wasn't as thick and cakey as I anticipated, and the giant chocolate chips hiding inside were like

Cinnamon chip

A snickerdoodle in a scone! Need I say more? Topped with sugar crystals and toasty cinnamon chips, this cookie-like confection was dotted inside with little cinnamon explosions that made it my instant favorite.

5 Blueberry with lemon glaze

A best-seller according to McNamara, this lightly glazed, tangy lemon-flavored sweet had a soft, cake-like texture. The blueberries were super-fresh, which often can go unnoticed in baked goods.

Hot dog

This is a dead ringer for the bagel dog of my middle school lunch days, only wider and flatter with the hot dog cut longwise into two pieces. This would taste awesome straight from Scone City's oven, but I settled for a little zap in the microwave, which softened it up just enough. Sesame seeds strewn across the top and a dollop of mustard hidden inside sealed the ballpark-inspired deal.

BOTTOM LINE

The awkward gap between Scone City's two daily scone deliveries can be disappointing, but that should be a thing of the past in a month or so, when the on-site kitchen is complete. Until then, count on funky flavors that will make you forget about the rock-hard scones of your pastry past.

finding an unexpected gift in a cereal box.

4 Buttermilk

I didn't expect much of this plain-looking scone surrounded by others with swirls of color and interesting toppings. It looked like a colossal sugar cookie sprinkled with sugar crystals on top and tasted like my grandma's homemade biscuits: sweet like cornbread, but not at all mealy, and smooth as buttermilk. The sugar on top gave it a crunchy touch of sweetness, and the lemon curd I smeared on only elevated the flavor.

The Tony Calzony
 PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

Meatball Tony Calzony ($11) at Bar Toma 110 E. Pearson St. 312-266-3110

This new menu feature at Bar Toma, which is a play on the name of chef and partner Tony Mantuano and the result of a social media naming contest, is every bit as ridiculous as it sounds. It's also really, really good. The calzone, which is more of a generous personal pizza folded in half than your traditional stuffed pocket, is loaded with thick, gooey cheese and sweet marinara. And though it comes in three varieties (chicken parmesan, eggplant caprese and meatball), the meatball is definitely the version worth your money. Dotted with sizable meatballs composed of a house recipe of beef, pork and veal that's so succulent it practically melts in your mouth, it's hard not to think of this over-the-top creation as the ultimate version of a meatball sub. The grainy, wood-oven-browned crust is thick and firm, with a little bit of chewiness, a sturdy vehicle for all that cheese, sauce and meat. The only pitfall? It's greasy, but that's what the napkin is for. TRIBUNE

 NANCY STONE/TRIBUNE

Cucumber sakerita ($9) at Mana Food Bar

1742 W. Division St. 773-342-1742

The cocktails at this vegetarian restaurant in Wicker Park—all sake-based—are built around fruits and earthy flavors, including horchata and coconut water. The vibe is best described as zen, even if the tiny eatery stays mostly crowded and boisterous. This drink—a mixture of Junmai Ginjo sake, orange liqueur, housemade sour mix and fresh cucumber and lime for garnish—yields a subdued tangy and botanic taste that washes your palate clean between bites. TRIBUNE

BREAKING DOWN THE BODY COUNT AFTER FOUR SEASONS OF 'GAME OF THRONES'

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

If you're a "Game of Thrones" character and you've made it this far, congratulations. Surviving four seasons of backstabbing, both literal and figurative, in this strange fantasy world is no small achievement. As we slither our way into Season 5, which premieres at 8 p.m. Sunday on HBO, here's a reminder of the ones we've lost and how they departed the Seven Kingdoms.

REDEYE@REDEYETCHICAGO.COM | @REDEYETCHICAGO

SANDOR CLEGANE, AKA THE HOUND

The Hound isn't dead ... that we know of. He was last seen bellowing for Arya to mercy-kill him while suffering gravely from a wound.

WHERE WE LEFT THEM

Checking in with the living members of our "Game of Thrones" family. Spoilers abound, obviously. D.M.

DAENERYS TARGARYEN

Emilia Clarke

Having locked two of her three dragons away due to the threat they pose her people, Dany is ready to continue her quest to become ruler of the Seven Kingdoms. She also banished her adviser, Jorah Mormont (Iain Glen), after learning that he had been spying on her for Robert Baratheon.

JON SNOW

Rick Herring

After taking command of the Wall's forces during a battle against the Wildlings, Jon convinces Stannis Baratheon to take their leader Mance Rayder as his captive for questioning.

ARYA STARK

Maïse Williams

The orphaned girl used the iron coin given to her by Jaqen H'ghar to gain passage on a ship to Braavos.

SANSA STARK

Sophie Turner

In order to protect herself from discovery by the Lannisters, Sansa has disguised herself as Alayne, the daughter of Petyr Baelish.

BRAN STARK

Isaac Hempstead-Wright

Bran and his companions finally find the weirwood tree from his visions, and he speaks with the three-eyed raven. HBO has announced that he won't appear in Season 5.

CERSEI LANNISTER

Lena Headey

Cersei has reaffirmed her passion for her twin brother Jaime and told her father Tywin that she refuses to marry Loras Tyrell. Cersei does not yet know of Tywin's death.

JAIME LANNISTER

Nikolaj Coster-Waldau

Breaks his brother, Tyrion, out of his prison cell to help him escape to Essos. Jaime doesn't yet know of Tywin's death.

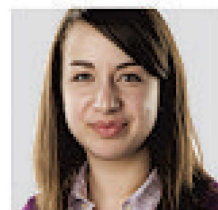

TYRION LANNISTER

Peter Dinklage

Stowed away on a ship bound for Essos after murdering his father and former mistress, Tyrion is accompanied by Varys, aka The Spider.

THE 5 NASTIEST, MOST HORRIFYING 'GAME OF THRONES' DEATHS

Megan Crepeau

» @crepeau

I tell my friends I love "Game of Thrones" for its sophisticated portrayal of power dynamics in a feudal setting, for the heartbreaking acting and the gorgeous sets and even for the costuming.

This is a lie. I watch it for the gore. There's something phenomenally satisfying about watching (fictional) gruesome [bleep] from a safe distance; you can test your own limits while sitting on the couch. My husband suspects I'm a sociopath. Maybe I am, but hey, at least I'm a sociopath with an HBO subscription. And that makes me uniquely qualified to write a list of the Top 5 best gory deaths in "Game of Thrones." Spoilers ahead (it is known).

5. THE GOLDEN CROWN

Weirdly, there wasn't a lot of visible grossness when Khal Drogo poured molten gold all over Viserys

Targaryen, Lord of the Jagoffs. The end result is even kind of beautiful, in a "creepy installation at the Modern Wing" way. What really turns your stomach here is the sound design—the subtle sssssssizzle as the gold burns his skin, and then the metallic "thunk" when his head hits the floor. I can't even think of it without making the D. face.

4. KNIFE TO THE UTERUS

The Red Wedding had more than its share of blood and guts, but stabbing a pregnant woman in the belly over and over? That's on a whole other level. What, they couldn't have just slit poor Talisa's throat and be done with it? The Robb marriage storyline was pretty weak sauce, but even she didn't deserve to go like that.

3. POOR ROS

Westeros' happiest hooker ends up hung like a piece of meat and shot with King Joffrey's crossbow—several times over. Gee, guys, do you think maybe this show's characters have a problem with women??

2. RAT BUCKET

The only reason—the ONLY reason—this isn't at the top of the list is because most of it happens off-screen. Otherwise, nothing could beat the utter disgusting genius of death by rat bucket.

Only someone truly sick could come up with torture device like this: Trap a rat in a bucket. Strap the bucket to your victim's torso. Heat up the bottom of the bucket so the rat has nowhere to escape but... you know. By the end, even I was ready to tell the Lannisters all my secrets.

1. THE HEAD POP

I shan't continue. If you've seen the show, you know what I mean. Pop. My editor made me watch it all over again to write this column, and I will never forgive her.

MEGAN CREPEAU IS A REDEYE REPORTER. SHE LIKES TO THINK THAT IN WESTEROS SHE WOULD BE A BEAUTIFUL, POWERFUL TYRELL, BUT IF WE'RE BEING HONEST SHE'D PROBABLY END UP SOME KIND OF TOOTHLESS PEASANT.

Scott Eastwood and Britt Robertson in 'The Longest Ride'

Romantic for about 8 seconds

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

» @mattpais

"The Longest Ride" pushes the City Girl/Country Boy dynamic to unintentionally hilarious extremes. She loves art! He rides bulls! How the heck are future hair models Sophia (Britt Robertson) and Luke (Scott Eastwood) going to make this work, especially when she's leaving North Carolina for New York in less than two months?

Luke's flower-buying Southern gentleman ways apparently are such a rarity at Wake Forest University that when he picks up New Jersey-native Sophia, her sorority sisters squeal and shout, "I want a cowboy!" Moronic bull-riding commentators call him "easy on the eyes and a magician on a bull," though he recently suffered a terrible, poorly addressed injury and blandly resembles the default setting of a "handsome white man" image generator. When Luke's supposed to be thinking intensely, Eastwood looks like his brain has launched its screen-saver. "The Longest Ride" is more enjoyable if you picture his father Clint in the role.

The Longest Ride

Because author Nicholas Sparks ("The Best of Me," "The Notebook") loves hopping between past and present, the 128-minute "The Longest Ride" also features Sophia becoming pals with an ailing old man (Alan Alda). She asks him for romantic advice and listens to his story of his wife and all the letters he wrote her, describing things she already knew about because they did them together. This is weird, and does little more than fetishize the past on principle.

Insulting to immigrants, minorities, soldiers and horses, "The Longest Ride" asks women to make the largest sacrifices, and a character actually thinks he's profound by saying, "This thing called life..." The world of bull riding seemingly would generate some heat. No other sport so demands a healthy pelvis and thrusting aptitude. But "The Longest Ride" is as sexy as a rodeo clown and much slower.

The throw-pillow maxim “Dance like no one’s watching” assumes that, were anyone around, they wouldn’t be risking their lives observing a dance performance forbidden by the government. And not just because that disclaimer would be too long for the pillow.

In “Desert Dancer,” which inevitably and semi-accurately will be called the Iranian “Footloose,” Afshin (Reece Ritchie) longs to express himself through movement, but that’s difficult to do in a country where teachers can hit students for dancing in class and the morality police will do even worse. It’s 2009 at the University of Tehran, where Afshin finds like-minded pals and founds a secret dance troupe. When Elaheh (Freida Pinto) auditions, the meaning she communicates without words almost gives a free pass to the movie to do and say whatever it wants.

Except, it doesn’t. Too often the true story-based, English-language “Desert Dancer”

Desert Dancer

favors simple and tame to detailed and credible—and includes lines like, “Our country is like two parallel worlds running alongside each other,” which makes you want to scream at the screen, “So I guess that’s what makes them parallel!” Another one: “[Dance] was her oxygen; she couldn’t breathe without it.” All together in unison: “Ohhhhhh, so that’s why it was her oxygen.”

And while it wouldn’t have made sense for the movie to get too politically involved, the historically uninclined may understand what’s happening during the allegedly rigged Iranian elections only if they saw Jon Stewart’s directorial debut “Rosewater.” First-time feature director Richard Raymond could have given “Desert Dancer” a stronger sense of the motives for repression than just, “You can’t do that.”

That doesn’t diminish the longing to feel even a few minutes of freedom (if you bet that this movie would avoid a line like, “When I dance, I feel free,” you lost), or the beauty that rises above sorrow every time these characters interpret their experiences into motion. But that it all leads to an embarrassing climactic scene during which Iranian enforcers comically seem to say, “Let’s wait to stop this performance, maybe it will support our restrictive policies ... nope, he’s protesting, shut it down!” should send you running to the gorgeous 2011 documentary “Pina,” which mostly let dance do the talking.

Rock 'n' Vote deadline extended to Sunday

UPDATE: The Rock 'n' Vote submission deadline has been extended to April 12. Also, there's a change this year: Rock 'n' Vote now will take place entirely online, so after we've narrowed down your submissions to the Top 10 and you've chosen your favorite four, readers will then vote online to crown this year's winner. The competition is going to be intense, so stay tuned for more details.

As you may remember, Rock 'n' Vote 2014 may as well have been called Rap 'n' Vote, as SoloSam, SamyLanguage, Daryn Alexis and Martin Sky showed concertgoers at Lincoln Hall why they rose above more than 200 local band submissions.

But don't forget that, as always, the 12th annual RedEye Rock 'n' Vote (whose alums include Rockie Fresh, JC Brooks and the Uptown Sound and I Fight Dragons) is open to all—women, men, rockers, rappers, whatever. If you're an up-and-coming Chicago artist who deserves more exposure, we want to hear from you. Send along your demo (links to music, bio, videos, anything else you have), and no procrastinating! Submissions must be received by April 12. If you're entering electronically, send submissions (music, color hi-res photos, etc.) to jterry@redeyechicago.com and mpais@redeyechicago.com and prove that you rock!

Time to tune in to 'Song Exploder' podcast

By Josh Terry | REDEYE

Every music fan should be listening to "Song Exploder," one of the best new podcasts. The premise is simple: Artists break down a single track in their catalog, detailing how they wrote it, what they used to make it and the inspiration behind it.

Since the series started in 2014 with its host, musician Hrishikesh Hirway, "Song Exploder" has featured guests as established as Oscar-winning composer Alexandre Desplat ("The Grand Budapest Hotel"), Ghostface Killah and the National to lesser-known artists like Open Mike Eagle, Julia Holter and more. No matter the artist's profile, the conversations are always fascinating, from finding out Chicago-based crooner How To Dress Well's "Pour Cyril" is inspired directly by the Dardenne brothers' "The Kid With a Bike" to Baths' clever use of synths on "Miasma Sky."

On Saturday "Song Exploder" is coming to Lincoln Hall for a live event, and the special guest is iconic Illinois emo group American Football. While the band hasn't unveiled which song off its landmark 1999 self-titled album will be discussed, it will be worth it to hear the full interview rather than just an edited, 15-minute podcast. Plus, everyone in attendance will get a free American Football silkscreened poster as an added bonus.

Marilyn's Grand Slam

Sure, Marilyn Manson's whole "prince of darkness" vibe can be a little much, but can't the guy enjoy his hash browns in peace? A late-night patron of a Canada Denny's didn't seem to think so, CBC News reports—a 21-year-old man apparently punched the singer in the face at around 2:30 a.m. Sunday in an Alberta location of the diner chain. Manson is on tour promoting his ninth album and, according to TMZ, plans to press charges. Denny's, for their part, tweeted, "We are happy to announce that no food was harmed during the post concert altercation."

THE DIGIT

$500K

That's the goal of an Indiegogo campaign set to launch April 16 that will help support the development of the Selena The One hologram project, Variety Latino reports. Along with the late Mexican singer's family, research and tech firm Acrovirt has announced "a walking, talking, singing and dancing digital embodiment" of Selena, who was killed in 1995 and portrayed by Jennifer Lopez in a 1997 movie. The hologram will release new songs, collaborate with current artists and is even set go on tour in 2018, the statement said. We're living in the future, people.

THE QUOTE

"CAN YOU BELIEVE THAT WE HAVE HILLARY CLINTON'S MAKEUP ARTIST? AND NOW HILLARY IS APPARENTLY ANNOUNCING SOON. SO, YEAH, I'M CONFIDENT THAT WE WILL LOSE HER."

—"Veep" star Julia Louis Dreyfus, to Allure, on art imitating life on the political comedy's set and Clinton's potential 2016 presidential bid

HOT DATE

APRIL 21

That's when Lady Gaga will hop on a bike and spin it out with a sweaty room full of her little monsters—or at least the ones who can afford to spend $1,000 a bike—at the new SoulCycle studio in Old Town, according to a press release. The class will benefit the singer's Born This Way Foundation, which aims to empower young people, and also will be attended by Gaga's mom, Cynthia. Here's hoping she leaves the meat dress at home for this one.

He really would

Funny man magician Penn Jillette is no stranger to quirk—the man named his children Moxie CrimeFighter and Zolten for God's sake—but we're glad to see he's committed to that quality at home, too. People reports Jillette's pad not only boasts a hot pink office and goldfish-shaped pool, but a Scrabble-themed bathroom. The wordy washroom features giant wooden letter tiles on the walls and a gameboard in progress on the floor. Some of the words already spelled out? "Peeing," "Tush," and "Clog." Because, obviously.
